ADDICTION WARNING SIGNS ⚠️

Addictions and addictive behaviours can result in a wide range of unpleasant and distressing symptoms and a whole host of devastating consequences. These include the breakdown of relationships, reduced work performance, poor physical health and a reduction in personal finances.

The signs of addictions vary depending on the type of addiction that you are suffering from, but there are common signs to look out for. Some of these are:

supporting people with
DRUG AND ALCOHOL PROBLEMS

It can feel difficult to support someone who is struggling with recreational drug or alcohol use. It might make you feel worried, frustrated or lonely. But there are things you can do to help.

This might include encouraging them to seek help for the first time.

If you are supporting someone seeking help for the first time, you could:

Reassure them
that it is OK to seek help

Help them
find out what services are available locally

Go to appointments with them if they would like you to. This may especially help for their first visit.
If they already receive treatment or support, you could help them stick to their treatment plan, go to appointments and meet their targets.

Turning Point's website has a tool to help you find local services for drug and alcohol use (the tool refers to it as 'substance misuse'). turning-point.co.uk/find-a-service

As well as helping them find treatment and support, these are some ways to help someone feel supported:

Find ways to spend more time together
You could try joining in with any activities that they enjoy.

Listen to them
if they want to talk about their experiences or how they feel

Try to explain
how their alcohol or drug use is affecting you

Look after yourself
Supporting someone else can have a big impact on your own life. By looking after yourself, you might also find it easier to offer support to others.

RISKS OF Alcohol Misuse

The short-term effects of alcohol consumption are outlined here. This information is based on the assumption that you have a normal tolerance to alcohol.

Dependent drinkers with a higher tolerance to alcohol can often drink much more without experiencing any noticeable effects.

1 to 2 UNITS

After drinking 1 to 2 units of alcohol, your heart rate speeds up and your blood vessels expand, giving you the warm, sociable and talkative feeling associated with moderate drinking.

4 to 6 UNITS

After drinking 4 to 6 units of alcohol, your brain and nervous system start to be affected. It begins to affect the part of your brain associated with judgement and decision making, causing you to be more reckless and uninhibited.

8 to 9 UNITS

After drinking 8 to 9 units of alcohol, your reaction times will be much slower, your speech will begin to slur and your vision will begin to lose focus.

Your liver, which filters alcohol out of your body, will be unable to remove all of the alcohol overnight, so it's likely you'll wake with a hangover.

10 to 12 UNITS

After drinking 10 to 12 units of alcohol, your co-ordination will be highly impaired, placing you at serious risk of having an accident. The high level of alcohol has a depressant effect on both your mind and body, which makes you drowsy.

This amount of alcohol will begin to reach toxic (poisonous) levels. Your body attempts to quickly pass out the alcohol in your urine. This will leave you feeling badly dehydrated in the morning, which may cause a severe headache.

The excess amount of alcohol in your system can also upset your digestion, leading to symptoms of nausea, vomiting, diarrhoea and indigestion.

more than 12 UNITS

If you drink more than 12 units of alcohol, you're at considerable risk of developing alcohol poisoning, particularly if you're drinking many units over a short period of time.

It usually takes the liver about an hour to remove one unit of alcohol from the body.

Alcohol poisoning occurs when excessive amounts of alcohol start to interfere with the body's automatic functions, such as:

- breathing
- heart rate
- gag reflex, which prevents you choking

Alcohol poisoning can cause a person to fall into a coma and could lead to their death.
